

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a valve assembly adapted to be positioned into a urethra in a mammal, including humans, the valve assembly comprising a) a valve holder and b) a valve housing comprising a valve controlling an urine flow from a patient's bladder, the valve assembly being arranged in a sealed manner between the walls of the urethra, said valve holder comprises a cylindrically shaped body to be inserted into the urethra